

You had 6 clear and relevant goals for your development to be challenged during this board year. All six points are nicely addressed in your showcase, and based on these goals you have brought clear evidences of your development as a designer, which go beyond what you seem to expect in your PDP.

In many some of your reflections, you mention your need to have an overview to be critical or to act upon the context you are focusing on. This overview is unfortunately not always here (and you know it become you hint it here and there, but without completely tackling it). You need to and will be challenged with clearly incomplete overviews while having to remain fully critical and engaged in your activities and decisions. I am sure it is already the case, but it is something that need to become the usual, and the expected, rather than actual overviews. Then the challenge is to know how much you know and how much you don't know and to evaluate the consequence on the relevancy and the adaptability of your decisions.

Now I hope you made sure you could do everything you wanted In reasonable time. I think the internship with Cindy van den Bremen will be great for you. I hope you can finish your minor (which is not clear from your showcase). Both worth to be completed with quality, and I would bet you can do this with great quality.

Verdict: P
